

BOTTLE SCORED ALDERMEN.

STATSMEN BAT THE BALL AND ALSO TAKE A FEW HIGH ONES.

Contest Between Legislative Teams of Manhattan and Brooklyn—Aldermen Marks Swallows Stub of Cigar and Bronx Delegation Everything Else.

If Aldermen Marks hadn't swallowed the butt end of a Staten Island delicious cigar just when he was reaching for a hot overhead liner, the score of the great Aldermanic game of baseball down at New Derby yesterday afternoon might have been different. It was the Manhattan Aldermen against the Aldermen of the Borough of Brooklyn, picked nine both of them, with a big feed coming after the game.

Civil spirits ran high. All the bases were full. The score stood 48 to 48 in the third inning. Aldermen Bridges was at the bat. The delegation from The Bronx, headed by Eugene McGuire, were still stuck in the hotel bar at the entrance to the grounds. That's as near as The Bronx delegation ever got to the game, but they were keeping tabs with runners from the field and keeping the official score with empty bottles. It kept them busy, but they never finished.

Gene McGuire, he paid for the counters, and he was on by the trayload cold and apples, and the boys emptied the stuff out of them into their inside just fast enough to keep the scorer supplied with the dead ones for markers.

Brooklyn was four ahead by rights and the score ought to have stood 52 to 48, but four of the Brooklyn markers got smashed by being tossed into the Brooklyn corner of the room. So they counted them out and made it an even score of 48 to 48.

That was when Aldermen Haenlein cleared third base so fast that his emergency brakes wouldn't hold, and he ran by the bag and got into some soft marsh land. But Aldermen Bennett, at third, was off hunting the ball in a cow pasture, because Aldermen Klein at first had handed in a skyscraper instead of a low grounder to head Haenlein off. So Haenlein was safe back at third and had a good deal of the swamp mud cleaned off his clothes when Bennett walked in from the country with the ball.

That is where Manhattan began to forge ahead. There was a dispute in the corps of umpires and the decision was being put to a roll call vote when Haenlein took a foxy advantage and walked in to home plate and scored before anybody noticed that he had stopped picking the mud off his clothes.

Then, while the umpires were calling the roll for a decision, Aldermen Aldermen got to first, second and third while the catcher was off at the beer counter in front of the grand stand.

Then it was that Aldermen Bridges came to the bat. The excitement was intense. The umpires forgot to vote. The decision on the Haenlein excursion to the swamp was still wavering in the balance. The rumor was started that somebody had told Aldermen Bridges that the ball was stuffed with the English language and that John was turned up for a swat at the sphere that would bust all the wadding out of it. But of course the rumor was true.

The ball started skyward and sailed off toward right field. Aldermen Marks he was there. He had just struck a match to light the butt of a cigar and he had it in his teeth. If that ball had come a half a minute later it would have been a lighted cigar instead of a juicy stub that Aldermen Marks swallowed.

The instant he saw that ball starting for him he knew something had to be done. Lightning decision and unerring judgment was the goods wanted and Aldermen Marks had the goods on him. He delivered them. With all eyes fixed upon him he lifted his right arm and whirled it, and the ball whizzed by some thirty feet over his head he swallowed his cigar stub and was off.

The air was split with a mighty shout. Aldermen Marks pale, but self-possessed, started on a swift lunge for the beer stand. Three men on him, but he was off. The day was won for Manhattan and the Marks of Brooklyn easily the hero of the field.

There was some more desultory balling, but the game from that time on was all one-sided. It was also somewhat confused from the fact that a good many of the players started off from time to time to vote and drink beer with the boys of the grand stand. It was not until there was a tallied count of the unbroken bottles in the scorers' private box in the grand stand that the game was announced. Eugene McGuire himself announced it. It was 10 to 9 in favor of Manhattan.

There was quite a turnout of Aldermen, though some said away, it was said, as they are still in mourning for the late Hiram Cronk and thought that this social function was a little too soon for the mourning of an event that had been officially solemnized. This, however, was a matter of individual opinion, many of the Aldermen holding that it is well to turn to lighter and brighter things as soon as possible.

Little Tim Sullivan was one of the absentees. While he had been objected to the ball game as an event inappropriate to a season of mourning, he had turned his back on it and had gone to the races. But Commissioner Goodwin lent their countenance to the game as did Borough President Cromwell of Richmond. President Cromwell, moreover, wore a straw hat, thus formally opening the straw hat season on Staten Island. The nines were as follows:
